Result area 1 - Human Security Security and Rule of law

RESULTS
Two programmes and their respective phase II implementation have been working to improve the capacity building within the government for the purpose of improved relationships between security providers. Programmes were carried out in the context of 1) countering human trafficking and 2) improved respect for citizens' rights and awareness of IHL/IHRL.

| Reasons for result achieved. | IOM has worked to strengthen the counter trafficking committee for the purpose of a coordinated interministerial approach to tackle the problem. It managed to increase the ownership and proactive approach of the committee following a recent study trip to the committees counterparts in Tunisia. The training of judicial police officers and border police is on track. IOM's collaboration with the first Vice-President, as well as buy-in from top generals to tackle the phenomenon, has helped IOM to keep momentum. ICRC has managed to implement its trainings as planned. It's long presence in Burundi and solid impartial reputation has helped foster trust within the political and military apparatus to continue having access. Training needs within the security forces remains high. The difference in targets and results is that the former have been wrongly registered in the RBM software as incremental as opposed to aggregate. |
| Implications for planning. | The challenge remains to translate the output of both activities into the desired impact of improved relationships between the security sector and the population in the current tense political and security context. |

Result area 2 - Rule of Law Security and Rule of law

RESULTS
Focus on access to better quality justice. Programmes were carried out in the context of 1) legal, psychosocial and medical support to victims of GBV; 2) conflict resolution; 3) follow up to judicial files to reduce overstay.

| Reasons for result achieved. | With two partner organisations having been requested by the authorities to close their offices in Burundi, it remains remarkable that implementation has managed to stay largely on track, be it with some delay. The two partners adopted an implementing partner capacity building strategy combined with increased decision making autonomy. The difference in targets and results is that the former have been defined for the end of the programme implementation phase and have been wrongly registered in the RBM software as incremental rather than aggregate over the programme period. Work on reducing overstay of prisoners beyond their term has yielded better than expected results, even though no baseline and target had been formulated at the start of the new programme. The combined delay and positive impact make we consider overall results to be on track. |
| Implications for planning. | Challenge will be to find ways how to catch up on delays in the programmes of the two suspended partners. |
